Abstract: Our aim in this paper is to establish a fresh eclectic approach to English-teaching methodologies starting with the analysis of the existing methodologies.

Following an initial analysis of the existing methodologies, we will expose their weaknesses and we will reflect on their use. Thus, we can provide a satisfactory theoretical framework upon which to build.

Finally, we will discuss the idea of a new eclectic method that may help improve the teaching of English with new technologies such as video games. We will also take into account our own experience of the “practicum” abroad in a native school.

Keywords: Different methodologies, eclectic approach, video games, native teaching, method, communicative, speaking, listening, reading, writing and ordering.

Introduction: Teaching a foreign language is considered one of the most difficult issues. However in the 21st century, there are so many solutions for this. Methodology is essential in this and every teacher should have perfect knowledge in this field. We will consider teaching a foreign language step by step.

Learning and teaching foreign languages largely depends on the theoretical development of foreign language teaching methodology issues and the creative application of theory in practice. The subject of the methodology is the process and methods of education through the subject of a foreign language, the science of teaching a foreign language, the study of teacher and student activity is considered the subject of the methodology. Foreign language teaching methodology as a science has more than 200 years of history. During this period, it can be observed that different attitudes towards foreign language teaching methodology were expressed. One of these views belongs to academician L.V. Shcherba. In his opinion, although the methodology of teaching any subject is a science, it is not considered a theoretical science. It solves practical issues. In particular, the methodology of foreign language teaching does not rely only on the evidence of psychology, but is based on general and specific linguistic studies. If linguistics deals with the origin and laws of movement of language phenomena, the methodology answers the question of what should be done in order to use the necessary language phenomena in practice based on these laws. The most valuable books on methodology are also written by linguists. The application of methods in teaching foreign languages has been started for a long time, and principles are relatively new methodological terms. Historically, the methods were grouped into four groups, and their names were called "translation", "correct", "comparative", "mixed". The history of methods is the famous methodist prof. It was studied in depth by I.V. Rakhmanov. First of all we consider it important to define the Word methodology.

Main part: Methodology-a system of ways of doing, teaching or studying something, describes concrete ways of Teaching.

Another definition: Tries to be as precise as possible giving examples of how to teach following a determined method. If we keep the methodology in school system, we pay attention to the following. Pupils' effective learning of a foreign language depends on the same methodology.

As a theoretical base and precedents, and since I have had the English Teaching

Method subject this academic year, I will follow the subject theory, in which we can find the different English Methods used nowadays and their main characteristics.

The Methods are as follows:

1. The Grammar Translation Method
2. The Direct Method
3. The Audio-lingual Method
4. The Total Physical Response
5. The Communicative Language Teaching
6. Task-based Language Learning
7. Suggestopedia

First of all we consider it important to define the Word methodology.

Methodology:

A system of ways of doing, teaching or studying something, describes concrete ways of teaching.

Another definition is tries to be as precise as possible giving examples of how to teach following a determined method.

Consequently, involving the students in the learning process is a major objective.

So a key component of our eclectic method developed from the existing method.

It involves the use of new technologies in our classes. The problem is that new technologies are a very general concept nowadays, but we teachers should guide the students to teach English especially to teach new students by using the techniques that they can't give up wisely.
